

- Yield measurements too noisy and disruptive to take place in the control room
- A quiet secondary place is required for operator training and beam tune development
- Operator cubicles are required year round to allow the operators to work on their projects during quiet shifts

